Statement by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Union of Myanmar on the ASEAN Leaders' Review and Decision

21 November 2026

MYANMAR takes note of the issuance of the ASEAN Leaders' Review and Decision on the Implementation of the Five-Point Statement at the 49th ASEAN Summit, held in Manila, the Philippines, on 15 November 2026. While Myanmar acknowledges some references in the said statement welcoming and recognizing positive developments in the country, it observes that the ASEAN Leaders' Review and Decision, as well as the suggestions and recommendations contained therein, do not adequately reflect the positive measures undertaken by the ASEAN Member State concerned; therefore, Myanmar considers the statement and recommendations to be unfair and imbalanced.

Although ASEAN has yet to reach a consensus, Myanmar continues to engage bilaterally with individual ASEAN Member States. Myanmar expresses its appreciation to those ASEAN Member States that have extended their support and assistance in recognition of the positive developments in the country.

Concerning the suggestions and recommendations put forward by ASEAN Member States, Myanmar has continued to cooperate to the fullest extent possible in the spirit of the ASEAN family, while safeguarding its national interests and sovereignty, as well as taking into account the prevailing circumstances on the ground, as the Five-Point Roadmap adopted under the former State Administration Council was closely aligned with ASEAN's Five-Point Statement.

Furthermore, with a view to enhancing relations with ASEAN, the ASEAN Affairs Committee has been established by the Office of the President on 29 September 2026. Subsequently, on 14 October 2026, Myanmar circulated information to ASEAN Member States and the ASEAN Secretariat on its continued efforts to facilitate the implementation of the Five-Point Statement, in accordance with its own roadmaps and national objectives.

Internal conflicts have persisted in Myanmar for over 70 years, dating back to the country's independence in 1948. Successive governments have pursued various approaches to bringing an end to the armed conflicts throughout the country. Similarly, the current Government has intensified its efforts to achieve

Announcement of Measures Against Forcible Conscription and Unauthorized Collection of Funds During Conscription Process

TO enhance national defence capabilities and ensure national security and stability, the Public Military Service Law and Rules have been enacted, and eligible male citizens are being summoned for military service.

The conscription process is being systematically supervised by the Central Committee on Public Military Service Conscription and the relevant Region, State, District, and Township-level conscription committees under existing laws and rules. However, some individuals scheduled to serve as public military service personnel have attempted to evade their national duty by fleeing to other communities, departing abroad, or hiring paid substitutes to serve in their place.

Exploiting the fact that conscription committees are monitoring and summoning those who evade service under various pretexts, unscrupulous individuals in certain towns and villages have impersonated officials to forcibly detain individuals, extort money, and unlawfully enlist them as public military service personnel. At the same time, certain ward and village administrators have been collecting monthly payments under the pretext of supporting public military service personnel from their respective wards and villages, as well as illegally collecting funds to pay for substitutes on behalf of those evading service.

These forcible detentions and unauthorized collections of funds constitute unlawful acts committed by unscrupulous individuals in violation of the Public Military Service Law and Rules. Accordingly, the Central Committee on Public Military Service Conscription and the Ministry of Home Affairs are treating the matter with utmost priority, conducting thorough investigations, and taking legal action.

Through ongoing investigations and enforcement actions by the Ministry of Home Affairs against these perpetrators, action had been taken in a total of 71 cases involving 199 offenders as of 31 October 2026. These comprise 49 financial extortion cases involving 102 offenders and 22 forcible conscription cases involving 97 offenders. In addition, regarding complaints submitted to the Central Committee for Public Military Service Conscription, out of 182 financial extortion complaints, action has been completed in 91 cases, 56 remain under investigation, and 35 were found to be false allegations; out of 43 forcible conscription complaints, action has been completed in 17 cases, 14 remain under investigation, and 12 were found to be false allegations, with effective legal action taken in accordance with the law.

The Central Committee on Public Military Service Conscription is working diligently to ensure that the conscription process is implemented systematically by the multi-tiered conscription committees in compliance with the law and rules. In coordination with the Ministry of Home Affairs, the Central Committee will continue to effectively identify and prosecute offenders to reduce and eradicate the forcible conscription of travellers, nighttime arrests, paid substitution in conscription, and the unauthorized collection of funds in wards and villages.

Members of the public are hereby informed that they may report any such incidents by calling the hotline numbers listed in daily newspapers for their respective Regions and States.

lasting peace within the framework of the Nationwide Ceasefire Agreement (NCA) and has consistently extended invitations to all relevant stakeholders to engage in peace dialogue.

Since February 2021, the National Solidarity and Peacemaking Negotiation Committee (NSPNC) has held a total of 180 meetings and discussions, comprising 109 meetings with Ethnic Armed Organisations (EAOs) that are signatories to the NCA, 33 meetings with non-signatory EAOs, 22 meetings with political parties, 13 meetings with peace facilitation organisations, one Peace Dialogue and two Peace Forums. Similarly, the Government has repeatedly extended invitations to members of terrorist organisations to return to the legal fold. From February 2021 to October 2026, a total of 5,871 members of EAOs and the so-called People's Defence Force (PDF) and other illegal and terrorist organizations returned to the legal fold, while others have continued to make contact with a view to doing so.

Under the present elected Government, NSPNC has also been reconstituted with a view to achieving eternal peace. The Government continues to extend invitations to relevant stakeholders to engage in dialogue without preconditions under the framework of NCA. In this regard, a total of 38 meetings and discussions have been held with NCA-signatory EAOs, non-signatory EAOs, and peace-related partner organizations.

In Myanmar, individuals are serving sentences in accordance with existing laws, but there are no political prisoners. In the interests of nation-building and on humanitarian grounds, pardons and amnesties have been granted since February 2021 to a total of 5,444 individuals charged under Sections 50(j) and 52(a) of the Counter-Terrorism Law, 7,894 individuals charged under Sections 505(a) and 505(b) of the Penal Code, and 126,964 local and foreign prisoners.

The Government of Myanmar has the responsibility to safeguard the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the State, as well as to protect the lives and property of its people. Accordingly, the Government has undertaken only those responsive measures deemed necessary to fulfil these responsibilities. In doing so, the Government has exercised utmost restraint and employed the minimum force necessary, in accordance with domestic laws and the applicable Rules of Engagement (ROE).

With regard to the provision of humanitarian assistance, Myanmar has been cooperating closely with the ASEAN Coordinating Centre for Humanitarian Assistance on Disaster Management (AHA Centre). Over the past five years, humanitarian assistance amounting to more than US$30.125 million has been provided to Myanmar through the AHA Centre.

In addition to the humanitarian assistance provided by ASEAN, the Government of Myanmar has allocated approximately US$37.382 million for Cyclone Mocha, US$50.720 million for Typhoon Yagi, US$1,639.463 million for the Mandalay earthquake, US$2.476 million for those affected by incidents of terrorism and US$68.742 million from the National Natural Disaster Management Fund to support temporarily displaced persons during the period from January to December 2025, amounting to a total of US$1.8 billion for the benefit of the people of Myanmar. Myanmar will continue to cooperate with the AHA Centre in facilitating the delivery of humanitarian assistance to areas where access can be permitted, subject to the prevailing security conditions.

However, it is regrettable that the fundamental principles enshrined in the ASEAN Charter – particularly those of respect for sovereignty, equality, non-interference and decision-making by consensus – have not been consistently upheld in a rules-based ASEAN's engagement with Myanmar. In addition, Myanmar's views, suggestions and position have, on numerous occasions, been disregarded, while its equal rights and full representation as an ASEAN Member State have been denied. Such practices run counter to the principles of inclusivity, equality, mutual respect and consensus-based decision-making that underpin the ASEAN Community and raise serious concerns regarding the consistent application of the ASEAN Charter and the ASEAN's established norms and practices.

With regard to the participation of ASEAN Member States in ASEAN Summits, such participation is determined by the respective Member State in accordance with Article 7 of Chapter IV of the ASEAN Charter. Myanmar views that such discriminatory treatment is inconsistent with the provisions of the ASEAN Charter and constitutes a departure from ASEAN's established practices and precedents.

Myanmar sincerely hopes that the fundamental principles of respect for sovereignty, equality, inclusivity and consensus-based decision-making enshrined in the ASEAN Charter will be consistently upheld. However, should these fundamental principles not be consistently upheld by ASEAN, Myanmar would likewise find it difficult to respect and abide by them, in order to safeguard the dignity of the State and uphold the collective will of its people.

Invitation to Join Rooftop Solar Power Generation and Sales Programme

21 November 2026

1. As the government is actively promoting the expansion of solar power generation in the electricity sector through various measures, the Ministry of Electricity and Energy is implementing a programme to install solar panels on building rooftops to generate and sell electricity ahead of the coming summer.
2. To ensure the safe installation and operation of solar power systems and related equipment with a capacity of 100 kilowatts or more, the Ministry of Electricity and Energy issued the Standard Specifications for the Installation and Use of Solar Panels and Related Equipment on 11 November 2026.
3. At a meeting held in Nay Pyi Taw on 6 November 2026, between officials from the Ministry of Electricity and Energy and local entrepreneurs, the ministry also invited local businesses to invest in rooftop solar projects.
4. To ensure that rooftop solar projects are implemented systematically in compliance with technical specifications, prevent building hazards caused by overheating of installed solar panels, and relieve building owners of the financial burden of capital investment, the following measures are being undertaken:
   (a) Private companies with technical expertise and sufficient investment capacity are required to take full responsibility for installing and maintaining solar systems, as well as generating and selling electricity using their own capital. Companies wishing to undertake these activities are being registered with the Ministry of Electricity and Energy, with eligible enterprises receiving approval within a short timeframe.
   (b) The Ministry of Electricity and Energy is entering into long-term Power Purchase Agreements (PPAs) with these companies to purchase the electricity they generate.
   (c) Reductions in electricity tariffs are also being offered to building owners who have rooftop solar systems installed.
5. In the first phase, rooftop solar installations are being initiated on state-owned buildings, including offices, schools, hospitals and markets, as well as commercial and industrial buildings in Nay Pyi Taw, Yangon and Mandalay.

6. In the second phase, arrangements will continue to be made to extend rooftop solar installations to residential buildings.
7. Through these initiatives, members of the public will undergo a transition from being mere electricity consumers to becoming prosumers who both produce and consume electricity.
8. Therefore, to accelerate the nationwide expansion of rooftop solar projects, local entrepreneurs are invited to increase their investments in such initiatives, while members of the public are encouraged to cooperate.

Myanmar Press Council strongly condemns ICJ ruling

THE International Court of Justice (ICJ) delivered its final judgement on 19 November 2026 in the case brought by The Gambia against Myanmar, alleging that genocide had occurred in northern Rakhine State. In its ruling, the ICJ determined that acts of genocide had taken place.

Concerning this case, Myanmar maintains that it did not commit genocide. The actions taken by Myanmar were military operations in response to terrorist attacks by the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army (ARSA), whose members violated Myanmar's sovereignty and threatened local communities and ethnic communities in Myanmar during the conflict. It has already been clearly argued and substantiated with facts, evidence and records that towns and villages were destroyed and local communities and Bengalis were forced to flee their homes as a result of threats, attacks, destruction, killings and acts of terrorism committed by ARSA terrorists.

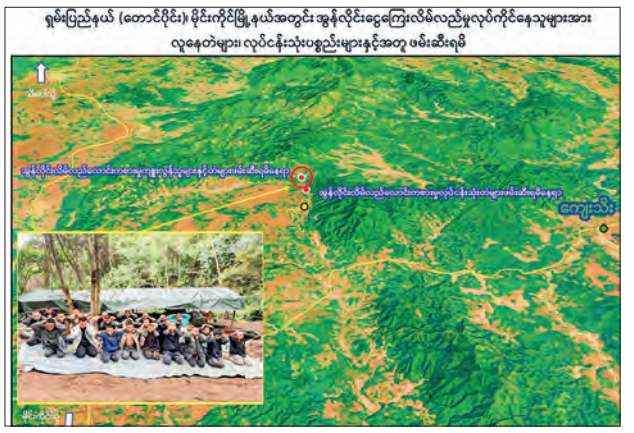

Myanmar has merely been subjected to unjust accusations in this case. Even before the final judgement was delivered, Myanmar had strictly complied with the provisional measures ordered by the Court, in accordance with international norms. However, the 15 ICJ judges did not reach a unanimous decision when delivering the final judgment. Only nine judges voted in favour of the ruling, while six disagreed and voted against it. This demonstrates that the ruling lacks fairness and justice, as it was not unanimous.

Therefore, as a sovereign nation, Myanmar will resolve its internal affairs through the unity and resilience of its people, in the interests of the country and to uphold its dignity. As the final judgement delivered by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) against Myanmar in this case is considered entirely unjust, the Myanmar Press Council hereby issues this statement to object to and condemn the ruling strongly.

25 online scammers arrested alongside related equipment in Mongkai

THE Government is taking vigorous measures to eliminate online scams and online gambling activities, which pose threats to the global socioeconomic environment and national security. In particular, effective efforts are being made to detect and combat such activities operating from remote border areas, while those committing such offences within the country are also being arrested and prosecuted severely. In doing so, Tatmadaw columns have successfully arrested 25 online scammers based in hiding in Mongkai Township, Shan State (South), along with their operational equipment.

This map, including an inset, shows the crackdown location and detained telecom frausters along with seized scam-related materials.

Acting on information provided by responsible residents that online scammers had constructed temporary residential huts and were operating from concealed locations in Mongkai Township, Shan State (South), Tatmadaw columns taking area security measures systematically gathered and verified intelligence, identified the locations, and carried out intensive area security operations.

Yesterday morning, upon reaching a location approximately 2,700 metres north of Lonsam Village in Mongkai Township, temporary huts used for online financial fraud were discovered. A subsequent search of the surrounding area led to the arrest of 25 Chinese nationals who had illegally entered Myanmar and were engaged in online scam activities at a location approximately 1,300 metres northwest of the site. They were arrested along with one temporary residential hut with 40 feet in length and 30 feet in width, one more residential hut with 30 feet in length and 15 feet in width, another residential hut with 50 feet in length and 30 feet in width, one temporary kitchen with 40 feet in length and 20 feet in width, two all-in-one computers, 39 assorted mobile phones, two Starlink devices, two power stations, two gas stoves, two Internet signal boosters and one router.

Those online scammers reportedly illegally entered Myanmar from China's Yunnan Province through the Myanmar-China border and arrived in Pangsang, Myanmar. From there, they travelled along the Wamhai-Kehsi-Panpo-Hamngai route to an area near Lonsam Village in Mongkai Township, Shan State (South). They reportedly began conducting online financial fraud operations around the first week of November 2026. They stated that they were promised a monthly salary of approximately 6,500 Chinese yuan but had not yet received any salary, as they had been working for only about 15 days. Using computers and mobile phones, they primarily targeted wealthy Chinese nationals through social media applications such as WeChat, Momo and QQ. They reportedly built relationships with their targets and deceived and persuaded them to participate in joint business ventures. Once the targets agreed to cooperate and transferred investment funds, the perpetrators cut off all contact with them. They also reportedly committed financial fraud by creating fake online websites for online shopping businesses and setting up counterfeit accounts impersonating successful and famous individuals.

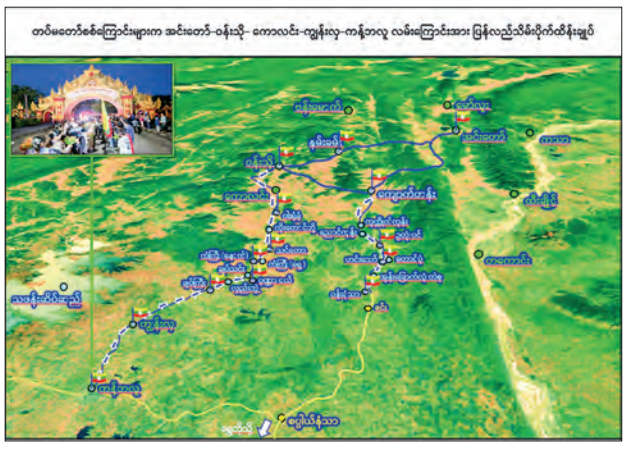

Upon completion of the investigations into the individuals arrested for online scams and online gambling activities, effective and severe legal action will be taken against them in accordance with the existing laws. The equipment seized will also be dealt with in accordance with established procedures. Furthermore, the illegally constructed residential huts and operational huts will be systematically dismantled and destroyed. Efforts to eliminate online scams and online gambling-related fraud are continuing actively and without interruption, with particular emphasis on eradicating these activities at their roots. – 100/TTA

Tatmadaw reopens Indaw-Wuntho-Kawlin-Kyunhla-Kanbalu route

TATMADAW columns have been courageously pursuing and driving out armed terrorists who have been taking temporary control of key communication routes in Sagaing Region and carrying out acts of sabotage. The terrorists have been hiding and operating in areas surrounding two major routes: the Indaw-Wuntho-Kawlin-Kyunhla-Kanbalu route and the Indaw-Kyauktan-Sabei Natha route. As such, Tatmadaw columns have successfully regained control of and reopened the Indaw-Wuntho-Kawlin-Kyunhla-Kanbalu route.

The CRPH, NUG and their affiliated PDF terrorist groups have temporarily taken control of some towns, villages and transport routes and are committing acts of terrorism in various ways. In response, Tatmadaw columns are vigorously conducting Counter-Terrorism Operations to swiftly retake and regain control of the towns, villages and communication routes temporarily occupied by the terrorist insurgents, restore regional stability and peace, promote local development, and rapidly improve the socioeconomic livelihoods of local communities.

In this regard, efforts are being made to regain control of and reopen the major communication routes in Sagaing Region that have been temporarily occupied by terrorist groups and used for carrying out acts of sabotage. These include the Indaw-Wuntho-Kawlin-Kyunhla-Kanbalu route and the Indaw-Kyauktan-Sabei Natha route. As of 15 November, the areas along these routes had been gradually retaken and brought back under control, extending up to Thintaw and Utonbin villages.

Map reveals Tatmadaw columns reopening the Indaw-Wuntho-Kawlin-Kyunhla-Kanbalu route in Sagaing Region.

In conducting the security operations in the areas, Tatmadaw columns reoccupied east Kangyi Village and west Kangyi Village on 16 November, Chatthin and Ponnange villages, Taungpon and Hinthaw villages on 17 November, Hlebwe and Ohnchauklon Tesu villages on 18 November, and Chatgyi and Pankhontha villages on 19 November. The victorious Tatmadaw columns, which had courageously fought against and defeated the terrorists and performed their duties with outstanding dedication, were warmly and enthusiastically welcomed back by monks and local ethnic residents in Kyunhla and Kanbalu. The welcoming crowds expressed their joy and appreciation by presenting victory sprigs of auspicious eugenia and congratulatory floral garlands, as well as performing traditional music and dances.

In making utmost efforts to reopen the communication routes, Tatmadaw columns seized 25 bodies of terrorists, 25 assorted arms, ammunition and related accessories, trenches, bunkers, residential huts, explosive devices, other utensils, and 236 assorted landmines made of empty barrels planted on main communication routes and roads between rural roads and buildings. During the period, Tatmadaw columns combatted combined terrorist groups in 50 minor and major clashes from 5 October to date.

The terrorist insurgents had planted various types and sizes of landmines along major communication roads used by the public and roads connecting villages, as well as around residents' homes and along village roads, with the intention of causing harm to the public, spreading fear and undermining local socioeconomic conditions. Despite various constraints, mine-clearance operations were carefully and systematically carried out over an extended period to detect and remove the mines, ensuring the safety and security of local communities and travellers.

Furthermore, repairs to residential buildings and houses, roads and bridges, and departmental buildings damaged and destroyed by acts of terrorism, together with necessary rehabilitation and area security operations, will continue to be accelerated with the active cooperation and assistance of local communities.

The PDF terrorist groups, having been misled and incited by the NUG and CRPH, are engaging in acts of terrorism such as these, which are significantly hindering the socioeconomic development and progress of local communities. Therefore, those who genuinely wish to contribute to the interests of the State and their respective regions should contact the nearest security outposts and return to the legal fold as soon as possible. The Government and Tatmadaw are providing necessary assistance and support to those who return to the legal fold and systematically handing them over to their parents or guardians. — 100/TTA

Overcoming the Challenges Arising from the ICJ Judgement through National Unity

By Min Khant

A superficial look at the ruling of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) regarding the genocide case, which has been a matter of intense public interest in Myanmar, might lead many to believe that The Gambia secured an outright victory and Myanmar suffered a defeat.

However, an in-depth analysis of the case revealed that it may be true that while Myanmar did face setbacks on several points, the outcome is nowhere near an insurmountable defeat. In fact, some aspects of the ruling work in Myanmar's favour.

By appearing before the court, Myanmar's counter-arguments and substantial evidence have now been officially entered into the international legal database. Without this defence, the international community would have accepted The Gambia's allegations as true facts. In this respect, Myanmar secured a gain amid unfavourable findings.

Believing in the integrity of the ICJ, Myanmar chose to engage with the court in good faith to contest The Gambia's lawsuit. Throughout the seven-year legal proceeding, Myanmar responsibly complied with the court's orders and directives. The Myanmar legal team presented solid legal arguments and evidence proving that there was no genocidal intent, explaining instead that security operations were conducted strictly as counter-terrorism measures against the atrocities committed by the ARSA terrorist group. Had Myanmar chosen not to appear before the ICJ, the court would have undoubtedly issued a far harsher, unilateral ruling with a unanimous 15-0 vote.

By appearing before the court, Myanmar's counter-arguments and substantial evidence have now been officially entered into the international legal database. Without this defence, the international community would have accepted The Gambia's allegations as true facts. In this respect, Myanmar secured a gain amid unfavourable findings.

The ICJ made 13 operative determinations, on which the 15-judge panel voted individually. Regarding the court's Determinations 1 and 2, the court ruled against Myanmar by a narrow margin of 9-6, finding that genocide was committed and that Myanmar failed to prevent it.

It is observed that the Court accepted unverified eyewitness testimonies, inflated casualty figures and exaggerated accounts, despite the lack of strong evidence from the Gambia side. The narrow 9-6 vote indicates that Myanmar's legal defence was effective. However, it is found that a majority of judges lowered the high standard of proof traditionally required in such grave cases for various reasons. Notably, the six judges who voted against issued a joint declaration strongly criticizing the Court for departing from established legal standards.

Regarding the court's Determination 3 (Incitement to Genocide), Myanmar secured a decisive 14-1 victory, since the court found that Myanmar did not incite genocide against the Bengalis through hate speech.

The court voted 11-4 on Determination 4 (Punishment of Perpetrators) that Myanmar failed to punish civilian perpetrators. Crucially, however, the ruling stipulates that Myanmar itself must establish an independent tribunal to investigate and prosecute these individuals. Unlike previous international cases where suspects were referred to the International Criminal Court (ICC) or similar international tribunals, the ICJ did not refer this matter to the ICC, which should be seen as a major positive outcome for Myanmar.

Regarding Determination 5 (Domestic Legislation), the court ruled 14-1 that Myanmar lacked adequate domestic laws to prevent genocide. While Myanmar had previously amended its Penal Code regarding homicide, the court deemed it insufficient. This issue can be readily resolved by enacting specific domestic legislation aimed at preventing genocide.

Regarding Determination 6 (Cessation of Violations), the court voted 14-1 ordering the cessation of any genocidal acts. Myanmar is already in full compliance with this directive, as Provisional Measure Order (PMO) reports were submitted regularly confirming no ongoing violations since the institution of the proceedings of the case before the Court.

> After carefully and thoroughly studying the Judgement, the Government of Myanmar, like any other sovereign nation, will take action based on its own determination, national interests and realities on the ground, while also seeking support from major friendly nations on the international stage.

Determination 7, which was decided by a 13-2 vote, mirrors Determination 4, directing Myanmar to investigate and prosecute suspects under its own domestic mechanisms. Determination 8 reiterates the obligation to prevent future violations, aligning with Determinations 1 and 2.

Determination 9, passed 10-5, calls for rehabilitation programmes. Because the Myanmar government is already actively implementing such initiatives in cooperation with ASEAN, certain UN agencies, and neighbouring countries including Bangladesh, China, and India, this poses no significant hurdle.

Regarding Determinations 10 and 11, the court ruled 10-5 that Myanmar is obligated to provide reparations to victims. However, in a major setback to The Gambia's expectations, no funds are to be paid to The Gambia. Instead, Myanmar is tasked with assessing the victims, determining the amount, and managing the distribution process over two years, subject to final ICJ approval.

Determination 12, which was passed 11-4, concerns the destruction of evidence, and this finding requires no further specific action from Myanmar. Meanwhile, Myanmar achieved a unanimous 15-0 victory on Point 13, rejecting all of The Gambia's remaining demands, including calls to grant citizenship to the Bengalis and to officially recognize them as an ethnic group of Myanmar under their proposed name.

Overall, the ruling cannot be characterized as a defeat for Myanmar. The Gambia failed to achieve its primary objectives, such as securing citizenship for the Bengalis, transferring suspects to the ICC, and extracting exorbitant financial reparations. Instead, Myanmar retained its sovereign authority to handle these matters internally.

Had the government failed to appear before the Court, a unilateral 15-0 ruling could have concluded the case before the 2025 elections, potentially threatening the country's territorial integrity. Successfully averting that outcome represents a clear gain for the nation.

After carefully and thoroughly studying the Judgement, the Government of Myanmar, like any other sovereign nation, will take action based on its own determination, national interests and realities on the ground, while also seeking support from major friendly nations on the international stage.

The international community should also respect Myanmar's sovereignty, independence, and territorial integrity, and view the difficulties and challenges Myanmar is facing objectively and fairly, and constructively cooperate and participate in improving the situation. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has already highlighted in a statement that, given the differences of opinion among the judges who made the decision and the complex and lengthy court ruling, the Myanmar government will take time to carefully study it.

In conclusion, the people of Myanmar have no reason to be overly alarmed by the ICJ judgement. Only when the government, the Tatmadaw (armed forces), and the public work hand in hand to safeguard national interests and sovereignty can the country overcome any obstacle and achieve lasting success.

Building strong foundations for the youth

PEOPLE develop different interests based on their various feelings and emotions. Those who enjoy peace and tranquillity tend to develop an interest in reading. Young people who enjoy reading visit libraries with extensive collections of books and bookstores to explore and read literary works.

Young people's lives are shaped and influenced by the different interests they pursue, whether positive or negative. For example, some young people are interested in sports. They choose their favourite sports, such as football, swimming or badminton, and make them part of their daily routines. Young people who love the Earth and value environmental conservation develop an interest in planting trees.

Young people who appreciate the natural beauty of mountains, forests, rivers, and landscapes are interested in painting. They observe the scenery around them and use their artistic talents to create paintings inspired by the landscapes they see. Similarly, young people who are passionate about music spend their daily lives composing melodies and creating musical works. When people engage in activities they truly enjoy, they always feel happy and fulfilled, no matter how tiring the work may be.

> Therefore, efforts should be made to ensure that young people have continuous access to education from an early age, while also encouraging them to develop a keen interest in reading. Such efforts will not only broaden their knowledge but also help cultivate their intellectual and moral qualities. By possessing acquired skills in various fields, including sports, arts and vocational disciplines as important foundations for shaping the future, young people will be better equipped to discover their own paths in life and pursue them with confidence.

Furthermore, among the various interests, reading is particularly beneficial for students and young people, as it not only broadens their knowledge but also refines their minds and cultivates their character. It enhances their ability to think critically and reflectively, enabling them to distinguish between good and evil, as well as right and wrong. Those who read extensively are generally able to express themselves fluently and pleasantly in conversation. If students and young people develop a strong habit of reading during their school years, they will continue to read consistently throughout the three subsequent stages of life.

At present, with the Government providing support and encouragement to young people in various fields, they are demonstrating their ability to contribute to national development through their talents and capabilities. The growing strength and capabilities of young people are evident in both the education and sports sectors.

Therefore, efforts should be made to ensure that young people have continuous access to education from an early age, while also encouraging them to develop a keen interest in reading. Such efforts will not only broaden their knowledge but also help cultivate their intellectual and moral qualities. By possessing acquired skills in various fields, including sports, arts and vocational disciplines as important foundations for shaping the future, young people will be better equipped to discover their own paths in life and pursue them with confidence.

A Companion for Life's Traveller
The Tao at Work by Stanley M Herman

SEIKKU Cho Cho Publishing House has released a new edition of a book titled "A Companion for Life's Traveller" (Bawa Khayee Thei Ei Ahpaw Mon) by Saya Maung Paw Tun.

This book is an interpretation of the classic text Tao Te Ching by the great Chinese sage Lao Tzu, who lived around 600 BCE. Numerous authors from around the world have translated the Tao Te Ching into many different languages, and each translation possesses its own distinct style and character. This book likewise has its own unique approach. However, what sets this book apart is its focus on leadership and being led – in other words, applying Lao Tzu's philosophy to real life and practising it practically in the workplace.

The translator, Saya Maung Paw Tun, won the National Literary Award (Translation - Aesthetic) in 1997 for Gandara Sanyay Aing (Oasis) and won it a second time in 2006 for Kankyama Akyintha (Prisoner of Fate). He was also awarded the National Literary Award for Lifetime Achievement in 2014 and passed away in 2022. Nevertheless, Saya Maung Paw Tun's beloved and renowned literary works have never faded and continue to be reprinted time and again. In his preface, the translator wrote: "I firmly believe that reading this book will bring great benefit to everyone, regardless of age, social class, or occupation."

As for the original author, he wrote in his introduction:

"Human beings are almost constantly encountering a myriad of difficulties, complexities, and pressures, and are continually having to resolve them. Amidst resolving these issues, pausing from time to time to make an effort to view things simply and clearly is immensely beneficial. This book is about seeing simply and clearly.

In particular, this book can be deeply helpful for those who have reached a transitional crossroads in their life's journey. For those feeling trapped and distressed by their current life circumstances or workplace situations, this book will help bring balance to those conditions. It will point the way to peace both for those seeking solitude and tranquillity on a seashore at dusk, and for those whose minds are overwhelmed by tangled problems in the workplace."

Chapter 1 opens with the following passage:

"You can choose how you will think and what you will do. You can focus on what is true, accurate, and solid based on your own study and personal experience, or you can participate in the latest, trendiest fanciful project.

If you join the latest, trendiest fanciful project, you must abide by the rules and regulations set by the respective business, political, or social enterprise. If you work hard, you will advance and prosper. You must dutifully carry out the slogans of your organization and operate according to its administrative structure. If, however, you choose the life of a truth-seeker, you must not accept popular opinion at face value, but rather search for the realities that lie behind the slogans. Both of these paths have their advantages as well as their disadvantages."

This is a book meant to be read deeply and introspectively. Therefore, keep it always within arm's reach and flip through it from time to time. Reflect on how it relates to your current situation. If you wish to contemplate deeply, you can read just one passage – or three or four – at a time, digesting them thoroughly and expanding your thoughts. The reader's task is to grasp the concepts within the passages they read and apply them appropriately to their daily lives.

Book Title	-	For My Daughter to Read: Serenity in Heart
Author	-	Maung Tha Cho
Publishing House	-	Seikku Cho Cho
Publication Date	-	October 2026 (2nd Edition)
Price	-	K18,000

For My Daughter to Read: Serenity in Heart

INDEED, a new essay collection by writer Maung Tha Cho, titled "For My Daughter to Read: Serenity in Heart," combines two earlier book titles into one volume. The first heading is "For My Daughter to Read", and the second heading is "Serenity in Heart". Both were previously published as separate books. The new volume is a combined reissue of those books by the Seikku Cho Cho Publishing House.

The book's review first pointed out a father's lessons to his daughter.

Among life's most important tasks is raising a daughter to be gentle, refined, sharp, outstanding, kind-hearted and mindful of the common good. Good children become good adults, and good adults make a good country, so it is essential that young people think rightly and act rightly. "For My Daughter to Read: Serenity in Heart" is a must-read.

In the preface, the author writes that "among those who have criticized my articles in writing and in speech, I quite like a remark by a schoolteacher: 'Your articles are about wrongs that cannot be prosecuted under the law.' That is true. How would I take legal action against someone who picks out and eats only the dried shrimp in a dish of Laphet Thok (tea leaf salad)? How would I take legal action against someone who barges in oblivious to propriety while two people are discussing an urgent matter? It simply cannot be done in any way. Only through culture, through the cultural refinement of each individual's mind, can we protect our world from becoming ugly. That is the basis of my articles."

In the section "Mirrors to Look Back", the author, a teacher at a rural school, describes taking a hired car from the highway bus terminal on a return trip to Yangon. The driver asked permission to pick up extra passengers along the way and to reduce the fare accordingly. The author agreed, reasoning that whether the driver earned K2,000 or 1,500, taking K500 less would make things easier for everyone. The author would save, the next passenger would be accommodated, and the driver would earn more. Therefore, he gladly gave permission. Not long after, a passenger waved the car down. At first, he looked as if he would stop the car, but after glancing at the rearview mirror, he changed his mind, returned to his original lane, and kept driving on. When the author asked why, it turned out that an empty taxi was coming along behind, so he had gestured to the waving passenger that a car was behind, saying, "There are few passengers today, brother. Please let that taxi take you."

The author ends the essay by telling his daughter: "In the world of fathers who harden their hearts and take whatever they can get, without looking at anyone's face, without considering anyone's life, without pitying anyone's survival, I was endlessly astonished by the heart of a young driver who left a passenger waving for a ride for the little taxi behind him. Even I could not carry that kind of heart as lightly as he did. And I thought life is like a mirror. Driving along life's road, it would be good if we cultivated the habit of glancing at others through a rearview mirror to build empathy and perspective.

In the section "Hands That Take Only What They Need", he writes about how an elderly nun collecting offerings of small notes such as K50 and K100 would take only as much as she needed and return the excess.

In this book, one will read a full eighty-three (83) sections of "For My Daughter to Read."

When autumn skies are clear and bright,
The weather feels so fresh and light.
Across our land, both near and far,
We celebrate beneath the stars.

Both young and old join hand in hand,
With joyful hearts throughout the land.
Kathina robes, the gifts most rare,
Are offered with devotion and care.

A sacred Buddhist festival,
A treasured custom loved by all.
Through generations, traditions shine,
A precious heritage, pure and divine.

By Hu Wo (Cuckoo's Song)

While walking in the late summer morning,
I chanced to arrive at the school side.

Just by accident, for great guns going,
I stepped out in a hurry.

At that instant, from the spinney,
When a flock of young cuckoos
Happened to sing in chorus,
My unbearable mind being desolated,
I saw of the past stage a glimmer
Full of sorrow and laughter _
Since images of feelings mixed
Flickered and enchanted me,
I gritted my teeth and conquered magic
Like a buffalo swimming in the lake.

Saudi Arabia agrees to triple crude stored in Japan amid Mideast tensions

SAUDI Arabia has agreed to triple the amount of crude oil stored in Japan to a maximum of 24 million barrels under Japan's joint stockpiling system with oil-producing countries, the Japanese trade ministry said Friday.

The two countries have been discussing cooperation on oil stockpiling and energy supply chains under an agreement reached in May, after US-Israeli strikes on Iran led to the effective closure of the Strait of Hormuz. Japan relies heavily on crude oil imports that pass through the strait, a key artery for global energy shipments.

Under the joint stockpiling system, oil companies from Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Kuwait, all major crude oil exporters to Japan, lease storage tanks in the country for their crude oil.

The companies normally use the tanks as a commercial supply and storage base for Asia. In an emergency, however, Japanese oil companies have preferential rights to purchase the stored crude oil, according to the Economy, Trade and Industry Ministry. — Kyodo

Argentine govt backs mega liquified natural gas project

THE Argentine government on Friday announced incentives for a massive liquefied natural gas export project, with total investment of $50 billion planned by 2050.

The project, to be developed by state-owned Argentine company YPF, the Italian company Eni, and the Emirati company XRG, is the largest investment project in the nation's history.

It is to exploit gas from the Vaca Muerta field in Argentine Patagonia, which contains the country's largest reserves and will export 12 million tonnes of LNG annually.

Economy Minister Luis Caputo said the project would involve $25 billion of investment between 2027 and 2030, and a total of $50 billion by 2050. It will be part of the Large Investment Incentive Scheme, known by the acronym RIGI, which was created in 2024 by the government of libertarian President Javier Milei to attract large-scale domestic and foreign investments with tax incentives, exhange rates and other benefits. — AFP

EU proposes tax on Big Tech to boost budget

THE EU put forward plans to tax the world's biggest digital companies to fund its next budget Saturday, as it seeks to bridge divisions among member states over the bloc's long-term funding.

European Council President Antonio Costa unveiled a new spending proposal that slashes by 204 billion euros ($224 billion) a plan initially put forward by the European Commission, which some countries had slammed as too onerous.

"I believe this proposal can bring us closer to a final agreement," Costa told a press conference in Brussels.

EU countries have been squabbling over the size of the next budget, with Germany leading calls for major cuts after the commission last year proposed a two-trillion-euro budget for the 2028-2034 period. — AFP

US Department of Agriculture hit by cyberattack

THE U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) was hit by a cyberattack earlier this week, raising concerns that sensitive information held by the agency responsible for the country's food safety might have been compromised, NBC News reported Friday.

Hackers accessed the department's system that facilitates payments to farmers, the agency told employees on Thursday, according to the report, which cited two former USDA officials with knowledge of the matter.

The incident followed a series of technology outages that disrupted air travel, banking and national security systems.

In the past few days, a global outage affected hundreds of millions of Microsoft users, while communication failures triggered a national ground stop that disrupted nearly 20,000 flights across the United States. — Xinhua

Named after the Turkish Mediterranean city hosting the UN talks, the voluntary "Antalya Artificial Intelligence Pledge" seeks to tap the technology's potential in finding climate solutions and assess its growing environmental risks.

KIM A-lim aced the par-three 16th hole on her way to firing an eight-under-par 64 for a three-stroke lead after Friday's second round of the LPGA Tour Championship.

The 31-year-old South Korean stood on 15-under 129 after 36 holes in the $11 million season-ending showdown at Tiburon Golf Club in Naples, Florida.

"When I hit, after, I felt it was a little strong, but hit the pin and then went in," Kim said of her hole-in-one. "I think it was luck." A field of 60 players is chasing a $4 million top prize, the highest in women's golf.

Tens of thousands of mascot fans gathered in a city near Tokyo on Saturday to meet and greet more than 200 life-size cuddly characters that promote local towns and businesses. In the land of Hello Kitty and Pokemon, mascots are used to promote everything from prison to railways to private businesses, and popular ones gain full-on celebrity status.

> The mascot meetup has been held in the city of Hanyu since 2010.

"This is the first time I've ever come to an event like this, so I'm kind of excited," Yuriko Okamori, 51, told AFP at the annual meetup event.

The mascot meetup has been held in the city of Hanyu since 2010 and nearly 220 mascots were invited to join this year, according to organizers.

On a stage, a troupe of animal mascots danced to upbeat pop music as a large crowd filmed them on smartphones and clapped along.

Elsewhere, a popular pony mascot representing Gunma prefecture was surrounded by fans eager for selfies, while a cat mascot was pushed through the packed crowd on a cart to make its way across the venue.

City official Shogo Dei, who oversees the event, said 80,000 people attended the two-day meetup last year and that organisers expect a similar turnout this year. —AFP

Latin America finds new rhythm in Cuban reparto music

CUBA'S "reparto" genre has soared from humble beginnings to centre stage of the Latin American music scene, counting Spanish superstar Rosalia and Puerto Rican artise Daddy Yankee among its fans.

Emerging roughly two decades ago in so-called "repartos", working-class neighbourhoods on the outskirts of Havana, the genre did the rounds on cell phones and USB sticks before blowing up on social media. A slick blend of energetic rhythms, catchy hooks and a generous dose of slang about money, parties and sex, reparto draws inspiration from Cuba's timba style and Latin America's world-famous reggaeton. Bebeshito, Charly & Johayron, and Ja Rulay are some of its most popular artistes of the moment, with their success driven by better internet access on the island, the arrival of Tiktok, and Cuban migration to Miami. "After we Cuban artistes set up shop in Miami and started to understand this (the music industry), that's when everything happened," Carlos Eduardo Perez told AFP at Miami's Billboard Latin Music Awards gala last month.

Listeners might not recognize his real name.

In the music world he goes by "Helabusador" — one of many flashy nicknames that complement the extravagant clothing, thick chains, gold teeth and tattoos quintessential to "reparteros". Although no representatives of the genre featured among the nominees, several performers walked the event's red carpet, possibly due to the raging success of "Dichavate", a track by Helabusador, Rey Tony and Ya Ice Dilan that has racked up 170 million YouTube views .— AFP

Italy gives green light to Tesla's assisted driving system

ITALY gave provisional approval to the Tesla Assisted Driving system on Friday, ahead of a final decision on a rollout expected next year at the European level.

Tesla Assisted Driving is the name the company uses in Europe for its Full Self-Driving (Supervised) feature, after European regulators questioned whether using the self-driving moniker, as the company does in the United States, was misleading.

Italy's transport minister, Matteo Salvini, announced the go-ahead on social media platform X — owned by Tesla boss Elon Musk — saying the decision was made "after an in-depth technical review of its feasibility". The Netherlands, Estonia, Belgium, Lithuania, Slovakia, Denmark and Finland have all authorized the system, according to their governments, but European holdouts include Germany and France.

Festive spirit builds ahead of Laos' That Luang festival

AS Laos prepares for the annual That Luang festival, excitement is growing among residents eager to take part in one of the country's most important religious and cultural celebrations.

The five-day festival, scheduled to take place from 20 to 24 November under the theme "Together Preserving Lao Culture", will feature a series of traditional religious ceremonies and cultural activities.

Adding to the festival's lively atmosphere are recreational activities that attract visitors of different ages. Among them is a balloon-dart game stall operated by vendor Neuk Bounsy, who said he was ready to welcome both domestic and international visitors throughout the celebrations.

The festival also attracts young attendees, especially students, who view it as a chance to spend time with friends and take part in festive celebrations away from their everyday routines. — Xinhua
